You're only getting ramen?
 It's cheap and plentiful. I eat it all the time!
 Do you know how much sodium there is in those things?
 C'mon! I'd there was too much salt in my body I'd taste like...
 OK, it's just a coincidence I taste like the Dead Sea.
 Let me go introduce you to the Fruits and veggies aisle.

Custodial

"These folks don't get enough recognition," said Mary Miller, assistant vice president of administration. "The custodians start working before the crack of dawn to make (A&M) ready for those coming in."

The ceremony was held yesterday as part of International Housekeepers Week. Richardson and 15 other custodial workers were recognized as being outstanding crew members. Safety awards were given to crews having two or fewer accidents in the previous year.

A&M employs 330 custodial workers, which are separated into 16 crews. Together, they clean 340 buildings totaling 12.2 million square feet, according to University Relations.

"Without these guys we couldn't go to class or to work each day," said Chuck Sippial, vice president of administration. "They are among the lowest paid, but the most valuable because they build our reputation."

Financial constraints have made the custodial job at A&M even more difficult. The University has 100 fewer custodians than it had at this time last year, Miller said. As a result, each employee is responsible for 32,000 square feet while at other major institutions, custodians average 25,000 to 26,000 square feet, Sippial said.

"Deans and faculty adopt these folks who clean their offices and buildings," Sippial said. "I get calls all the time when we have to move them around because they become part of their family. We encourage that, but we have to tell them we're just doing our job."

During the ceremony, it was also announced that the Employee Advisory Committee has been expanded and three members of the custodial staff have been added to provide better representation.

"The custodial staff is a big, productive and effective team," Miller said. "I'm honored to be a part of that team. I hope people all week celebrate and thank them."

hear stories like that every day down here."

Allen said students were hard when they heard that crime involved fellow Aggies.

"It is scary when it happens people you know," Allen said.

The A&M Galveston Campus Police urges students to follow basic safety rules.

"Always be aware of your surroundings, and have your keys ready when approaching your car," Sgt. John Collins said. "Know where you are in relation to landmarks so you know that you are parked in a dark place, don't go in and put yourself in a compromising situation."

Collins said that if you are approached, don't resist because your life is not worth your car.

kids' menu from waiters without even asking."

Thompson said he does have those problems now because he is taller.

"I started dating as I got older," Thompson said. "Life is normal for me now with few worries than before."

Despite reaching an age height of 5 feet 8 inches, Thompson continued to work for the High Growth for Hardin's research.

"I'm not a doctor, but I believe there's a lot of good to come of Human Growth Hormone," Thompson said. "I've heard that we should just play with cards we're dealt, but I'd like to see one of those people if they were in my shoes for years ago."
