

NAVARRO CONTINUED

campaign only foreshadowed her effort this year. Navarro won back-to-back events this season, the UC Irvine Invitational and the Dr. Donnis Thompson Invitational, becoming only the sixth Aggie to ever do so.

At the UC Irvine Invitational, Navarro needed a birdie on the 54th and final regulation hole to force a sudden death playoff with the University of Southern California's Gabriella Then. After matching scores for four holes, Navarro finally outlasted Then with a par on the fifth playoff hole. Navarro won the tournament and earned special exemption into the invitational's affiliated LPGA Tour event, the Kia Classic, this past March.

"Well, since it was my second year playing the UC Irvine, I knew what the course looked like," Navarro said. "And so, a few weeks or a month before the tournament, I practiced several of the shots that I remembered and it helped a lot."

The prospect of exemption into an LPGA Tour event, an experience she described as surreal, raised the stakes for Navarro heading into the event.

"Every time you get the chance to play for an LPGA exemption, that gets you excited to win, excited to play," Navarro said. "And that was my goal, get the exemption, and I just went for it. I was focused and I didn't care what the others were doing so I just did my own thing."

Heading into postseason play, Navarro leads the team and maintains a tie for first in the nation in scoring with an average of 70.95 supported by five sub-70 rounds on the year. She shows a tendency to play her best golf when pressure mounts, as she averages 69.43 in final rounds of play. McCombs said Navarro is motivated by a determination to win rather than focusing on finishing in the top five.

"She just wants to win and she wants to be the very best and I mean, if you talk about it from a technical standpoint, her short game is probably one of the best in the country," McCombs said. "She's just consistent, but I would say determination is probably her main key of why she beats so many people."

Her determination was on full display two weekends ago at the Rebel Intercollegiate, when the Annika Award watch list nominee overcame illness and doubt that she would even complete the tournament to finish second.

Navarro fired a tournament record -6 (66) in her final round in Oxford to help plant the Aggies atop the team leaderboard for the second time this season. She was named SEC Golfer of the Week just a few days later.

Navarro said after A&M she will likely look for a full-time run on the LPGA Tour. With Tiger Woods as her golfing idol, Navarro said she will do whatever it takes to succeed, even if that means doubling her current practice regimen and intensifying physical workouts.

"In 10 years, well, I want to be number one in the world," Navarro said. "That's my goal."
